

Marita Moll

Marita Moll is the North American Regional At Large Organization (NARALO) representative on the At Large Advisory Committee (ALAC). At Large is the ICANN constituency that addresses the concerns of the individual internet user.

Between 2015-2018 she served on the Board of Directors of the Canadian Internet Registration Authority (CIRA), the steward of .ca -- Canada's online identifier and was co-chair of the CIRA community investment program which gives back by funding innovative community projects.

She has been involved with communications policy since the early 1990s when she worked with some of the first grass-roots organizations that developed around Internet access issues and helped found some of the early Canadian Internet advocacy organizations. Between 2000 and 2012, as part of a University of Toronto research project on the impact of the internet on end users and communities, she co-edited and contributed to five collections of essays on communications policy in Canada.

She is currently the president of Telecommunities Canada, a group of individuals and organizations concerned with internet policy and practices at the national and international level.
